Cybernetics is the study of the control and communication mechanisms in the animal and the machine –according to Dr. Frederick Bernard Wood who was 2nd. father of cybernetics (only after Norbert Wiener) and who from 1986 through 1989 was the author’s mentor in systems sciences and cybernetic engineering, then he becoming Wood’s youngest and closest colleague in those fields until his death in 2006–. Since 1986 the author has been using the approach suggested in 1965 by Wood in his work, “Cybernetics and the Next Step in Civilization” to monitor what affects the biosphere and life on planet Earth. And since then, as suggested by also Wood in his, “Reviving the 1941 MIT Radiation Laboratory ‘Zeitgeist’ to Attack Starvation and Climate Change”, the author also attempted to use that Zeitgeist to find the weak links that affect humankind and trying to hit the nail on the head of the weakest link; after over 34 years studying and tinkering with this issue, the author decided that the weakest link is the historic inhuman use of the human race on Earth and the cosmos (which has to do with the concepts of both, Richard Nolan’s Breakaway Civilization and Herbert Marcuse’s lack of eros in civilization). This work deals with why this what is to be done about it.
