Zak is forty years old and feels as dried up as the land. He hasn't had a woman in years and is getting pretty desperate. After a night on the whisky his old friend Billy persuades him to answer an advert in 'The Matrimonial News'. He is skeptical but what the hell, he doesn't believe anything will come of it and it's easier to keep Billy quiet.

Within a couple of months Zak finds himself waiting for the stage coach into town. Dressed in his Sunday best he feels awkward waiting for a young woman.

As Jessica Sanderson steps off the stage coach she looks even younger than her 18 years. Tired and weary she tries to look brave and looks around for the man who will change her life. After nursing her father for 5 years she has no family left or no home; Zak is her only hope.

Their eyes meet and both are shocked and surprised at what they see. Zak seems far too old in her eyes and she is but a child.
