The Conservatarian Solution: Part 2 (No. 5 Conservatism) Jim DeBellis

Relentless in his one-man attempt to rescue freedom and prosperity from the moral ransom required by the far right and the contemptuous disregard of the far-left, Jim DeBellis explores in plain language the the problems with agenda-driven party rule and the simplicity of the solution to the dysfunctional, demagogic, and divisive state of American governance:

"Leave government out of the equation, and just live and let live as far as possible. That is the essence of 1776 Americanism and the classical brand of liberalism that we are trying to preserve today. That is the essence of the constitution and the cornerstone of what I call "No. 5 Conservatism."

It's not moderation or compromise. It simply puts us back in alignment with the real basics of our founding values before they were co-opted by partisans and special interests. It's a clean, unadorned ideology and empowering philosophy that allows evangelicals and environmentalists to be on the same team to move America ahead, rebuild our economy, and let go of the hatred and division that have so corrupted and paralyzed our political system and media.

We need to shed our partisan goggles and set aside our moral and social agendas in order to see and think clearly. In Part 2 we will endeavor to do just that. We will try to separate agendas from ideologies. We will look at good liberal issues and the fallacy of the liberal method, utilized by left-wingers and right-wingers alike to achieve their partisan agendas. We will look at the false and failed narrative of socialism and the validity of a truly conservative method, and we will culminate with a discussion of pure and curative No. 5 Conservatism that oversaw the birth of our nation and its rise to greatness."
