The civilization's remains (!), found after long-lasting efforts, are described in the final excavation reports as: "The remains of five cell phones and two tablet computers were found in a house with a major fire destruction level. Unfortunately, they are out of condition due to metal oxidation that occurred over a period of 1000 years. We think that the device in question might be a digital library that contained thousands of books, approximately a thousand years ago. However the 1000 year span of time has made this digital library unusable. Therefore, we are unable to access the writing and culture of the people living in this period."
