Ty and Marcus Mitchell are average middle school brothers growing up north of Chicago until one night when they're hurtled through an inter-dimensional gateway to a parallel world defined by its multiple moons and planet-wide apocalypse. As they struggle to figure out where they are and how to get home, the boys encounter refugees of "the last day" from the distant city of Atlantis and a mysterious girl called Bellana, the sole survivor and resident of the devastated metropolis of Spartanica. Ty and Marcus soon learn they only have seven days to get home. But before they can leave, they must battle through long-extinct deadly predators, find the elusive Professor Otherblood (if he's still alive), and rescue a new friend from certain death. Is all of this insanity just Ty's overactive imagination or are the brothers truly on the brink of being stranded in the brutal wasteland known as Spartanica?
