I sighed happily to myself and dreamt hazily of Harriet, of having her there next to me in bed, of having her personally read and critique my stories, and I even pictured what it would be like to walk into the National Book Award reading with her, dressed fancy and grinning.

Having moved to Chicago for her MFA graduate degree in writing, ever-introverted and somewhat geeky Penny is focused on her studies and her own creative writing. While she can't help but imagine what it might be like to be involved with her pretty writing workshop professor, the up-and-coming literary star Harriet Drake, it all just seems like a wild fantasy, a far away dream, until she suddenly finds herself as the object of her older teacher's romantic affections.

But Harriet is a complicated older woman, a budding writing luminary, soon destined for awards and accolades. Can Penny keep up with her professor? Is Harriet actually interested in Penny or is she just looking for a fling with a young student? And when life presents Penny with a wild choice, will she be able to seize the day and live in the exciting world of a writer... or will she let this novel age gap romance slip away?
